The 2020 RAV4 LE comes with a 2.5-liter four-cylinder engine (203 horsepower, 184 lb-ft of torque) and an eight-speed automatic transmission. Front-wheel drive is standard..

You might expect the RAV4 LE, as the base-level trim, to be sparsely equipped, but that's not the case. It comes standard with features such as LED headlights, a variety of driver safety aids (Toyota Safety Sense 2.0), a 7-inch touchscreen interface with Apple CarPlay and Android Auto compatibility, a USB port and a six-speaker sound system.

This new model gained a variety of improvements such as a more powerful engine, more safety features and bolder styling. These changes have no doubt bolstered the RAV4's popularity, and it continues to be one of the best-selling vehicles in America.

Certainly, it has some appealing qualities. The RAV4 is roomy inside and has plenty of space for rear passengers and cargo. It also comes standard with an array of advanced driver safety aids such as forward collision warning with automatic emergency braking. For 2020, Toyota has also added Android Auto smartphone integration (a boon for Samsung, Pixel and other non-iPhone users).

On the downside, the RAV4's engine, improved as it may be, is still underwhelming. It's not especially powerful and gets noisy when you stand on the gas. And unlike some rival small SUVs, there's no optional engine you can upgrade to if you want quicker acceleration. We're also disappointed with the lack of comfort for the RAV4's front seats and the vague steering, which doesn't give you a good feel for the road.
