1979 Ford F150 4x4 Short Bed survivor in solid condition and sure to impress. The original burgundy paint has faded over the past 42 years and what's left behind is a beautiful patina. The truck has been well preserved by the previous owners and was told it spent a good portion of its life out west.

The body, cab, and underneath are solid. There is rust on the passenger side bed arches and the passenger side bed. Some small areas starting on the bottom of the driver's door and one small area inside on the drivers floor pan. The frame underneath is original and not hidden underneath undercoating. It has scaly surface rust as you would expect. A wire wheel and some rust mort and undercoating would be our next steps if we were keeping this truck. Inside the bed there are a few small holes / pin holes. Everything mentioned is shown in the detailed photos. Overall a very good example of a 79' F150.

This was the last year for this body and for those who follow these trucks know this is an excellent find in its condition and price point. Great truck to drive as it sits or boost its value significantly and restore it back to its former glory. We happily get red in the cheeks they way this truck looks today!

Powered by Fords 351 this truck runs strong and sounds great doing it. The C4 Automatic transmission shifts smoothly and overall this truck runs down the road well. It starts right up like a new vehicle and functions as it should.

A few extra parts come with the truck including new carpets which we did not install to get a good look at the floor pans. A 3.5" lift was recently installed, and it sits on 35" Cooper Discovery tires. This truck has a presence to it and gets attention everywhere it goes.
