Contrary to popular belief, the 4.3-liter V6 engine was a popular choice in the Monte Carlo line during the 1980s, it provided decent power and fuel economy. This engine was paired with an automatic transmission. The car was not considered to be a high-performance vehicle in this configuration, but it was known for providing a smooth and comfortable ride. The 1987 Chevrolet Monte Carlo Luxury Sport featured a sleek and aerodynamic body design, with a sporty and luxurious interior. The car came with a variety of features such as power windows and mirrors, air conditioning, a digital clock, and a premium sound system. The car was also equipped with a sport suspension package, which improved handling and ride quality. This one seems to be very well maintained throughout the years and complete, needing only a new garage to call home and a new owner to take it on the occasional cruise. This car is definitely nice enough to be one you could daily drive and or take to shows. As always we encourage you to come see the car in person as well as the 80 other vehicles in our inventory and check out our showroom while you're at it. Financing is available and trades are welcome.
