This 616 HP Bentley Continental GT Speed convertible is capable of a drag-limited 202 mph. It can cruise along at triple-digit velocities all day. This is the fastest four-seat convertible in the world; actually, it's one of the fastest series-production cars ever built, a much improved from the regular W-12 fails to accomplish. Increased turbo boost elevates power from the W-12's 567 horsepower to 616 in the Speed. Maximum torque rises from 516 lb-ft to 590.

A Replacement today will cost easily over u$300k , The eight gears of the Bentley's impressive ZF 8HP transmission can be selected manually through column-mounted paddle shifters or via the centrally mounted and there are tangible benefits of having eight speeds: Highway fuel economy is estimated at 20 mpg, although any uphill stretches and/or forceful acceleration sends mileage plummeting.

The 616-hp Speed sounds even more impressive than the regular W-12, and the soundtrack can be further enhanced by selecting the transmission's Manual or Sport mode. The difference can be recognized easily even at idle, and depending on engine load and speed, the exhaust note oscillates between a growling bass and a bloodcurdling wail.
